"Star in My Kitchen" Will Glorify Art of Home-Making

Motion Picture Cooking School offers Helpful Suggestions to Housewives—Sponsored by Addison Advertiser in Avon Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23, 24 and 25

Going to school in a theatre! It sounds a bit strange, doesn't it? But that is what women of the community will be doing when the Addison Advertiser Motion Picture Cooking School comes to town on Monday, May 23.

There will be real lessons, too, lessons in measuring, mixing and blending the ingredients for many recipes; in the preparation of such triumphs as a lattice-top fruit pie; in making delicious frozen desserts and salads; in laundering fine fabrics; and in planning healthful meals for growing children.

The camera has assembled all the expert information of trained home economists—not as a routine lecture, not as a formal "highbrow" demonstration, but as a real romance of home-making, full of suspense and charm, and informal chats from-one-good-cook-to-another.

There will be remarkable close-ups of each process in a series of model, conveniently-equipped kitchens—real, workable kitchens, (not the synthetic, false-front variety), where trained home-makers will plan and complete the preparation of several meals so the entire audience can see the process step by step.

The finished dishes, which will be shown in full color, will look as though they could be picked right out of the picture and eaten on the spot.

The class won't be all work, for there is the constant play of sparkling humor, the appeal of tender romance, the suspense of a coherent, intelligently interpreted play.

Keeping pace with the baking, roasting and frying, a series of salads and frozen delicacies will parade in and out of the adaptable electric refrigerator, which will reveal its host of possibilities for simplifying labor and marketing, and contributing to good health and good food.

What to do with left-overs? How to take the gloom out of laundry day? How to save time, energy and temper in meal preparation? How to be attractive in spite of the daily rush? How to make the piecrust that men love to eat? How to give first-aid to fallen cakes?

It won't be necessary to ask the questions, for expert home specialists have anticipated these very problems. They know what bothers many an experienced housekeeper, because it is their job to know and to counsel helpfully.

Fun, novelty and entertainment are joined throughout the feature picture, for it is always fair weather when neighborly cooks get together. Home-making has a universal appeal, and every woman is eager to learn the newest news of her craft.

Cooking, romance, modern kitchens and clever actors and actresses do not tell the complete story of this 1938-model cooking school. The picture is a whole laboratory of modern ideas and wise counsel, touching on latest developments in home equipment and accessories, including laundry methods, ways to prepare left-overs, beauty secrets, hints on saving time and labor, and fresh suggestions on how to entertain graciously, as well as how to be thrifty.

It won't be necessary to carry pad and pencil and try to scribble measurements in the darkened theatre, because free recipe sheets, with complete formulas for many of the delicious dishes prepared in this Motion Picture Cooking School will be distributed daily.

In addition to the daily recipe sheets, a generous store of gifts are destined to be carried back to many a home from the Avon.

Don't miss the 1938-model school, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23, 24 and 25 in the Avon Theatre.

Remember Cleanup Days Tuesday and Wednesday

Tuesday and Wednesday of next week are cleanup days!

The village authorities will engage men and trucks to cart away rubbish accumulated through the winter in yards, cellars and attics. They will not remove garbage or ashes, for these must be disposed of by the individual householder.

People of the village are asked to leave the rubbish at the curb Monday night as collections will begin early Tuesday morning and continue through Wednesday night until all are taken.

The village fathers thus take the lead in beautifying the village and ask the cooperation of all in keeping the streets, yards and alleys clean throughout the summer months. In addition it is hoped that with the cleanup campaign there will come a wave of repairing and painting which will aid in beautifying the village.

Remember the times, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, May 17 and 18.

Peterson Tells Ad Club Why Americans Should Save Democracy

Odessa Cleric-Assemblyman gives unusual talk on patriotism—Speaks of My America as creed, investment and a parent.

"My America" was entertainingly and dramatically described for members of the Advertising Club of Addison at the luncheon held Wednesday noon in the Baptist Church. The speaker was the Rev. Dutton Stiles Peterson, Methodist minister of Odessa and assemblyman from Schuyler County. His was one of the most interesting talks heard by club members this season, and pointed to them a way to make America safe for Democracy and its ideals. The speaker was presented by Winfield S. Long, chairman of the program committee and a schoolboy chum in Tioga County, Pennsylvania.

The talk was preceded by a roast beef dinner served by the ladies of the Baptist Church. President Charles L. Crane presided at the dinner which was attended by 27 men. Walter Goff introduced as his guest Aden Ingals of Fremont, Charles Scudder of Campbell and Herman Bates of Troupsburg, all supervisors and in Addison to determine what should be done with the Reuben Brook culvert. Ancestors Addisonites

The speaker prefaced his remarks by telling why he was delighted in coming to Addison. He said, "It brings back many memories for me to come here. Sam Stiles of New Hampshire fought in the Revolutionary War after 150 years of family history in America, became restless and came to the far west and settled in the wilderness which was then Addison, settling with the first settlers. With him was his son Reuben. Reuben remembered a pretty cousin, Phoebe Dutton back home and when grown to manhood went back to New Hampshire and brought that pretty cousin as his bride to Troupsburg where they settled on a farm which has been in the family until recently when sold by Theron Stiles.

"She gave her name to Reuben and when they had their first son they named him Dutton Stiles after her name. Dutton went to Bath to a Methodist training school and entered the ministry, ministering to the people of Northern Pennsylvania for 25 years, dying young at 50. He served faithfully in Potter County, caring for his farm into the late hours, often by midnight moon, and ministering to people of the vicinity. When his mules became tired from field work, he often walked to his people until his shoes gave out when he walked barefooted over the hills of Potter county. At 50 he announced to his wife and daughter one night, 'I'm tired' and died.

"His daughter, Ellen, became my mother and from them I have taken the name Dutton Stiles and by desire for the ministry. And then 17 years ago I came here as a delegate to an Epworth League meeting and at 18 taught school at Borden so associations bring many pleasant memories to me. And all this brings me to my topic.

My America

"I am going to talk about a trite word and phrase. We sing and write about My America. I could talk to you about legislation. I could entertain you with experiences. But My America is important to me and I want it to be to you.

NERO FIDDLES

"Again Nero fiddles while Rome burns!" With this quotation did Frank Gannett ably describe the attitude of the President towards the calamitous depression he has brought back to this country.

How truly does that old saying depict the Roosevelt pose in this hour of national need. As Mr. Gannett said in Corning Saturday evening, "He laughs and jokes as if everything were all right . . . he goes fishing down in the West Indies".

How does Nero fiddle when Rome burns? Well the President started the first strains of his comic opera last fall when the growing effects of the Roosevelt depression were just reaching the point where men were losing their jobs and commodities and securities were going rapidly down. In that emergency instead of acting to show industry the government would take no more punitive measures to interfere with private employment the President did exactly the opposite. He called for a special session of Congress to act upon reform legislation which would further cripple manufacturers and harass the taxpayers. When the House revolted against his wages and hours bill the Chief Executive blamed that revolt against business and retaliated by starting his New Deal henchmen, Jackson and Ickes on speaking sprees which castigated big business and angered little business by attacks meant to raise a hue and cry through the country against monopoly. The President was trying to make business, which was already hampered and crippled by his punitive efforts, the whipping boy for the rapidly snow-balling Roosevelt depression.

When the Jackson-Ickes talks back-fired on the instigators the President decided to regain lost prestige and assume more dictatorial powers by demanding the new session of Congress to pass a government reorganization bill to cloak him with greater authority. Disregarding the deepening depression and the millions who were daily dropping into greater misery Mr. Roosevelt threw all the strength of his patronage power into the effort to force the Senate to pass this bill. His determination to force this legislation are shown by other words of Mr. Gannett.

"We thought we had this bill killed in the Senate", Mr. Gannett said Saturday. "Then the President talked for thirty minutes on the telephone with one Senator who had promised to oppose the bill—I have a telegram in my pocket in which he gave his promise. I don't know what the President said, but that senator broke his word and voted for the bill."

Well, in spite of the limitless Rooseveltian patronage the House finally killed the bill because of an aroused American public. But did that change the tactics of the President? On the contrary it seemed to spur him on to new political measures designed to increase the depression—as if the tides of national recession were not strong enough to suit him. He must needs introduce legislation which would add more taxleeches to the gargantuan national bureaux. Again he called on Congress to pass a wages and hours bill. And when a committee of the House, seeing the folly of such a measure to increase the depression, refused to report out the bill, the President ordered all the powers of his office into the fray. By the power of his cohorts Mr. Roosevelt obtained enough signatures of House members to force the bill out on the floor.

So once more the Congress of the United States has been rushed into another cat and dog fight over reform legislation in an hour when the nation is being rocked to its depths by the Roosevelt depression. Why does Nero fiddle while Rome burns? Why does the President place greater value upon these New Deal whims than upon the national well-being of the great majority of the American people? Why does he fight for social legislation aimed to give a few people a guarantee of certain specified wages—when they have a job, yet depriving thousands more of any job at all?

These questions are not so hard to answer, for one who has studied the methods of Roosevelt political philosophy. The answer is simply this: In spite of all his high-sounding protestations for the wants and rights of the underprivileged, Roosevelt at heart is not a common man. He knows nothing about the common man, except what he has been told by master politicians. But he does know there are a vast multitude of men and women who are either economically or mentally below a certain plane—the plane in which he was raised. He knows these people exert a vast power in the ballot box. He knows that if real peace were made with industry the demand for goods would grow at an immense rate and this army of people now living off WPA or welfare hand-outs would be absorbed into private jobs that would pay them a much higher income. He knows that a well employed people are a satisfied people, and political demagogues and would-be dictators have little influence with contented people.

In fact the answer is the President is still ambitious for another term—for the praise of the crowd ringing in his ears. So that is the reason Nedo fiddles while Rome burns.

A NEW KIDNAPPING

The other day a man who has been a national figure for two decades was kidnapped on the streets of an American city and whisked away by officers of the law. What was that man's offense that he was thus unceremoniously snatched away? He proposed to make a speech against the dictator of that city and his methods. And because Norman Thomas, twice a candidate for President of the United States on the Socialist ticket, dared invade Jersey City, Mayor Hague ordered his police to ride him out of town.

We do not agree with the political philosophy of Norman Thomas. We think he is absolutely wrong in his beliefs regarding the efficacy of Socialism as a cure for any and all ills of society. Yet we believe that Norman Thomas is undoubtedly sincere in his beliefs and that as long as America is a free country he has a right to express those beliefs—so long as he does not advocate the overthrow of our government. In throwing Thomas out of the city he rules with a dictatorial hand, Mayor Hague was committing an unAmerican act and should be criticized and, if need be severely punished.

As we understand it, Norman Thomas went into New Jersey to speak against Mayor Hague and his personal ruling methods. And because Hague is a high-handed despot in his own political domain the mayor is determined no voice shall be raised against him. So Thomas was forcibly carried from the city and his inalienable American right of free speech was denied. Now what Norman Thomas had to stay about the rottenness of that political molasses pot in New Jersey is of little importance to most of us. Yet the fact his free speech was interfered with is of the greatest importance to all of us.

Lincoln truly said that, "America cannot exist half slave and half free". And by the same token American institutions cannot continue long to exist when we deny men their free speech on questions we do not hold the same individual opinions on.

There is an undertow growing dangerously fast in this country today to limit freedom of the press. There is not the shadow of a doubt that such radicals as Cohen and Corcoran would give an eye to be able to censor all newspaper references to their influence on the President. An attempt was made back in the days of NRA to write into the newspaper code a provision for licensing the press, which would have spelled finis to free speech. It was resisted, as we must resist every encroachment against this right.

Two things go hand in hand—dictatorships and government control of the press. If the New Dealers in this country could absolutely control all utterances of the press for just a few weeks, a dictator would be set up so quickly the man in the street would never realize how it happened. For when every source of information people get is colored by those in power, how can one know what the truth is? That is why the people of Germany, smart though they are individually, can be held under the thumb of an egotistical waxed mustache like Hitler.

We must be continuously on guard! The muzzling of Thomas by Mayor Hague seems a remote thing to most of us, yet we should vigorously oppose every such thrust at limiting free speech. A wave of protest should arise against Mayor Hague—not because we disagree or agree with what Norman Thomas has to say—but because he was denied the right to say it.

REWARDS OF FIRE PREVENTION

Winter is over. The good days are here. And millions of people will soon start a pleasant round of motoring trips, picnics, camping excursions and other forms of outdoor recreation.

If you are one of these, you will see nature at her best. But do your part to make sure that she continues at her best—by being careful with fire.

There are millions of acres of ravished, blackened stump land in this country that once bore magnificent trees — because someone was careless with a campfire. Some of the finest natural garden spots have been turned into ashy wastes —because someone was careless with a cigarette. Animals and humans have perished horribly in holocausts of raging flame — because someone took a chance with fire.

Don't go on a camping trip without the basic tools of fire control—a shovel and a good-sized bucket. If possible, make a rock fireplace for your fire. Under no circumstances build it near brush, dry leaves or other easily inflammable materials. Don't build a large fire—a relatively small one is adequate for all camping needs. And when you are through with it, really put it out—douse it with water, and shovel dirt over the ash. Be certain that not a spark remains.

"The catastrophic developments of recent years, the startling events of the past weeks, offer a tragic demonstration of how quickly the contagious scourge of treaty breaking and armed violence spreads from one region to another."

Mr. Foster invites farmers and rural people to tune in their radios on the N. B. C. network on May 14 at 11:30 A. M., E. S. T. and hear Mr. King and Mr. Hawley discuss New York's agriculture and some of its problems.

The French-British Alliance

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE most interesting [illegible] about the Fre[illegible] agreement is, perh[illegible] does not [illegible]. Not a w[illegible] tioned a[illegible] the [illegible] treaty. If the Er[illegible] agreed to back up[illegible] she goes to the he[illegible] vakia, one wonders[illegible] have been offered[illegible] sion. For it is one[illegible] ticular British gover[illegible] m[illegible] have made without much enthusiasm. The British, of course, need not have said that they would support France if she assisted her Central European ally. But if they agree that France should support her, then they will be drawn into backing that support, willy-nilly. For the new alliance is the most formidable thing that this generation has seen. It really amounts to establishing a common army, a common command, and a common foreign policy.

Some students of the situation believe that Britain will demand, in return for this, that France give up the French-Russian pact. But if the French treaty with Czechoslovakia is to stand and even be fortified, then one cannot envisage France doing anything so defeatist as abandoning her agreement with Russia. And, perhaps even more importantly, it is probable that any French government which proposed to do any such thing would face a revolt at home. The French workingman believes in the pact with Russia. And so does the French Army.

Furthermore, the abandonment of the Soviets by the Western powers, would almost certainly, sooner or later, draw Russia and Germany together, and if that happened, with the obliteration of the small Central European powers, it would be a social and ideological event of the first magnitude. Then the Western world would really have something to fear.

What the Nazis will do now is a matter for speculation. Most observers think that Germany will certainly not take on Czechoslovakia at the risk of a European war. First of all, though Czechoslovakia is a small country of about fifteen million people, she has one of the best armies on the Continent for its size. As Winston Churchill recently pointed out, it is almost twice as large as the British Army. Officially it has a normal strength of 178,000 men, but for months past it has stood at around a quarter million, and probably 3,000 000 men could be quickly mobilized. Its equipment and material are first-rate.

Czechoslovakia will be asked to make every concession to the German minorities "compatible with her national honor." If Czechoslovakia would abandon the Russian-French alliances, my guess is that Mr. Benes could have [illegible] Nazi leader Henlein on a German charger. [illegible] France prepared to s[illegible]s, that is unlikely, Czechoslovakia might be either [illegible]ssia or the Serbia

Sailing Under False Colors

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE basic trouble with the National Labor Relations Board is that it is not a national labor relations board. Until this fact is generally understood and frankly recognized the Wagner act will continue to be a major cause of antagonism between capital and labor, between employers and the Administration.

While it is generally supposed that the board was set up in order to regulate the relations between employers and workers, in fact the board has no power to do anything about the promotion of industrial peace. That is still the function of the Department of Labor. The board has no power to conciliate, to mediate, or to arbitrate; it has no power to deal with working conditions or with wages, with strikes, with lockouts, with the equity of labor contracts, with their interpretation and enforcement. It is sailing under false colors when it calls itself the National Labor Relations Board. For it is no such thing. It is a special agency designed to enforce the theory that the constitutional right of labor to organize in unions means that all labor in an industry must be represented by the union selected by a majority of the workers.

The authors of the Wagner act never intended to create an agency which had authority over, or responsibility for, the promotion of industrial peace. Thus if there is a strike or a lockout in an industry which is already unionized, the dispute cannot be taken to the National Labor Relations Board. The public may think a board with such a beautiful name ought to be able to do something about a great dispute in a unionized industry, but the board can do nothing.

Once a union is recognized by the employer, the board has nothing further to say about labor relations in that industry. And if ever all national employers recognized unions, as they do, for example, in England, the board would for all practicable purposes have no further reasons for its existence. Though there might still be great disputes between unions and employers, though these disputes led to gigantic strikes or lockouts, the board in spite of its name could do nothing whatsoever.

I do not think that employers generally understand this. I doubt whether many in Congress understand it. I feel sure that the general public does not understand it.

The Wagner act was inspired originally by the idea that though workingmen have a constitutional right to organize, in fact this right has been nullified in many of the mass production industries. The right is nullified by espionage which identifies the men who are active in labor unions and by discrimination in hiring and firing which amounts to intimidation. The primary object of the Wagner act was to create a Federal agency which would protect workers in the exercise of their civil right to organize. If it had been properly named, it would then have been called by some such name as the Board for the Protection of the Civil Rights of Industrial Workers.

This would have been its name if the sponsors of the Wagner act had followed their first inspiration. But they did not. They soon decided that the constitutional right of a worker to organize meant that he must belong to, or at least be represented by, a union selected by the majority. A minority of workers have no rights that the Wagner act as now interpreted will protect. Their constitutional freedom of association is treated as a compulsion to follow the union of the majority. So the board is no longer concerned with the protection of the general civil rights of labor.

It is now a board to foster the organization of unions which shall have exclusive power to speak for the workers in a plant or in an industry. In practice the board is a Federal agency for assisting the union organizers of the C. I. O. or of the A. F. of L.

All the criticisms of the National Labor Relations Board are based on the false assumption that it was meant to be an impartial tribunal for the promotion of industrial peace. But there is nothing in the Wagner act, except the rather disingenuous preamble, and there is nothing in the record of the board, to sustain this view The board is not a tribunal. It is a prosecuting agency. It is not impartial. It is committed to the promotion of a certain type of labor organization. Its purpose is to put the Federal power behind the right of certain types of labor unions to organize the unorganized workers, and to exclude all other types of labor unions.

The function of the board is to prosecute employers who do not deal exclusively either with the C. I. O. or with the A. F. of L. That is the only aspect of national labor relations that the National Labor Relations Board is concerned about.

The Wagner act being what it is, it is useless to expect, or for the board to pretend, that it is a quasi-judicial tribunal. It is not in any sense concerned with the administration of justice in labor relations, with the determination of the respective rights of labor and capital. Its hearings are not to be regarded as law suits but as investigations to determine whether the board has sufficient evidence to prosecute an employer for not dealing with the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L.

The board is the advocate of a special policy—that every national industry should be organized either in a C. I. O. or an A. F. of L. union, and it has two clients, the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. The right of the employer, or of the independent worker, to have a fair hearing is confined to the question of whether he has interfered with the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L. organizers. No other problem of labor relations will be considered by the board.

If, as seems most desirable, Congress decides to investigate the operations of the board under the Wagner act, it should address itself first of all to the task of explaining frankly to Congress and to the country just exactly what the board can and cannot do. This would raise immediately the question of whether a highly specialized prosecuting agency ought to be called the National Labor Relations Board. There would follow the question of whether a specialized prosecuting agency of this sort, with such a very narrow conception of constitutional rights, is in fact a desirable thing when set up as an independent agency.

This would lead to the broader question of whether the board ought to be abolished and its function as protector of civil rights given to a bureau in the Department of Justice, or whether its authority should be broadened by converting it into a true labor relations board, protecting employers' rights as well as union rights and empowered to conciliate, mediate, and even arbitrate in the whole field of national labor disputes.

One thing is certain. As long as the board pretends to be a labor relations board when in fact it is a prosecuting agency and promoter of a particular kind of unionism, it will be the cause of endless misunderstanding and confusion. So if it cannot be reformed, it should at least be forced to sail under its true colors.

This Week In Sports

The garrison finish staged by the Addison High School team last Friday afternoon in playing Dundee cost Coach Miller some gray hairs, I'm sure. With a substantial lead in the next to the last inning, Dundee put on a spurt and hit a homer with two on the base tying the score. Addison hitters then got into action and with no outs managed to put a run and victory in the bag.

JOHN E. LYNN

John Emerson Lynn, 61, died in Glens Falls, N. Y., May 2, 1938 after an illness of three years. Mr. Lynn will probably not be remembered by many of the younger people of this vicinity for he appeared here many years ago as a trouper in the town hall. He appeared with his wife in a valudeville act and later played in stock shows with his own company. He retired from the state about 15 years ago. During his many visits here he made friends with many of the local residents.

Addison Knights' Garrison Finish Humbles Dundee Nine 13 to 12

Locals open with barrage of hits and maintain margin until closing inning when Allen hit home run with two on to tie the score—Two hits and base on balls in final inning spell victory for winners.

The Addison Knights took the measure of the Dundee academicians here Friday afternoon to the score of 13 to 12 in one of those last minute storybook rallies.

The Knights opened the scoring in their half of the first inning with two runs and added three more in the second for a substantial five run lead going into the third and held until the fourth when the visitors uncorked a barrage of hits which netted two runs.

Addison scored a run in the fifth while the visitors scored four. The Knights battery swung into full action in the sixth when six runs were batted in while the team batted around. Things looked good for the home team going into the final inning. However, Dominick, on the mound for the Knights was nicked for four straight hits in the seventh inning. The first three were singles . However a neat play pulled one of the men into an out and then with two out Allen of Dundee hit a long fly ball into deep center field for a home run and three scores to bring the score even. This ended the scoring for the Dundee squad.

The big stickmen for Addison were on the line at the opener of the seventh and with the third Dundee pitcher facing them, included Lyons, Croft, Triches Thompson and Root. Lyons hit, Croft flied out, Triches singled and Thompson was struck by a pitched ball. Bill Root, catching his usual game for Addison, took a look at the ball, measured it carefully and hit, but it was a fly ball just out of the infield. Lyons on third, watched the ball into the receiver's hands, dashed for home and victory. Addison won with two men left on base and two outs to go.

Dominick went all the way for Addison. He was in tight pinches several times during the fray but was pulled from many hot spots by his fielders. As an example of this the locals scored two double plays. Outerson, Coons, and Smith were the pitchers for Dundee and Dominick for Addison.

affecting the world today. There is no Divine Providence guiding us to the extent that we cannot fall into the pitfalls which have befallen other nations. Over 150 years have gone by of devotion to My America. It is a creed to me, a convincing creed.

America—Land of People

My America is not a land of acres, of roads, of hills and valleys. They were here before people migrated here. It became America when people settled and lived here. This is what makes America.

Magna Carta

"In 1215 there was a growing conviction in the Old World that man had rights of his own and thus was presented to King John the Magna Carta, one of the half dozen great documents of all time. First it meant that these people, serfs, sold with the land, had to be heard They were to sit with their king and be heard in things affecting their life and property and secondly their persons and purses were their own and the king did not have the right to say, 'I want your son, your cattle, your money or your crops' unless he could show a just reason or cause and then the reasons must be heard by the people and the people said to King John, 'your term as king lasts just so long as these rights lasts.'

First Settlers

"The individual rights of man have been increased through the years. When these rights were denied, a little group chartered two small sailing vessels, one of which landed in America and brought with it a group who believed in political and religious freedom and had deep convictions relative to these rights.

"They began building a civilization. They made mistakes as they stumbled along. Half of them died during the first winter of starvation and their comrades stole out in the dead of night to bury them that the Indians might not know of their depleted numbers. They suffered privation and death rather than abandon their convictions and return to the countries where these would be denied.

American Revolution

"Later the King of England wanted money. The colonists told him he asked for it without their consent and without consulting them which was taxation without representation which violated the third term of the Magna Carta. The stamp tax was so small it would not be noticed in today's taxes. But as long as there was not representation in government, that government ceased to exist for them.

"They went hungry for that ideal. Today people are selling that ideal for a meal. If we lose this ideal we cannot pick it up again. Democratic government has been a slow accumulation.

America—a Parent

"The second reason for my America is this. As the years roll on I have an increasing reverence for my parents and their parents. America is more than houses and land. America is a parent, such as my own, which has bestowed on me things I never earned and never valued. It has given me things no nation in history ever gave its citizens, health, happiness, food, music, literature, art and everything I want is given to America's poorest sons. Think of the suffering of my parents that I could have the things I have never earned.

My Investment

"My America is an investment. My great grandparents fought and were injured and died in the Revolution, in the war of 1812 and I have seven pieces of German shrapnel in my body because I love America. In the Marine unit with which I served in France were 1,000 men who went abroad and 71 came back unscarred and only 171 wounded and alive altogether. Mrs Peterson's brother was killed by the shell which injured me.

"When I say investment I mean I'll never walk without pain. I remember the comrades, more than brothers to me, who sacrificed as your and my ancestors sacrificed and builded. I say my America is an investment into which I have put the best I have.

America's Mission

"America has a Divine Mission. If we cannot retain Democracy with all that we have inherited, will there ever be a nation that can? If we sell our inheritance for the immediate gratification we will not get it back in a 1000 years. America has a Divine commission to retain the rights of men for the world.

"We need to look where we are going. I'll speak to you not about politics, but about movements and men. I'll not criticize Washington but our own Albany. In the closing days of our legislative session we sat for 32 hours and 16 minutes to act upon 650 bills affecting the welfare or illfare of 13,000,000 million people of this state, a state greater than many old world nations.

Lobbies Opposed

"There are too many mouthpieces for someone else. The session was supposed to end at 5 P. M. and at 4:55 the clock was stopped and we legislated until Saturday night at 6:16, kidding ourselves in the stopped clock session. At midnight, seven hours after adjournment, I voted against a bill which I had neither read nor seen, nor any of my colleagues read or seen as far as I can learn. And then the state head of the American Legion threatened to smash me because I had not voted for the measure. I demand to read and see what I vote on. When I sit in Albany, I do not think of the Legion, of which I am an officer, of the Grange but only of what I think concerns the entire state.

"We need less rule by organized minorities or else give rubber stamps to the lobbists. Let us preserve government by representation. All virtue and all good is not confined to one party and all vice and sin to the other. Those who place party ideals above the state deserve defeat. The Governor is the governor of my state and as such deserves consideration.

The Drunken Driver

"I'm not a crank on drink but it costs the people of New York State $2,350,000 last year from the drunken driver. A man has a right to drink but he does not have the right to drive into me on the highway in that condition. We have got to find a way, without kidding ourselves, to solve this problem which took the lives of so many and which caused the revocation of 3,140 licenses last year. We must find a way to organize the appetites.

"We must find a way to live in this swift machine age which requires our every effort. The machine must be our servant, not our master. We must find how to use the machine age safely. And the use of the machine must be coordinated with man so that man does not have his own way, but cooperates with all of us.

The Future

"I'm an optimist. I believe that we inherited the ideal, ideals and strength of character from our ancestors who builded and planned and sacrificed and I believe that we can preserve and carry on in those traditions if we will."

Dr. Barron Addresses Board of Supervisors

Health Officer Dr. W. E. Barron of Addison appeared before the Board of Supervisors Monday to ask that the Pleasant Valley Sanatorium be rctained by Steuben County and not abandoned as has been suggested by supervisors. The matter was originally promoted as an economic measure, the proponents of the measure stating that it will be cheaper to house county convalescents at Mt. Morris than to maintain the home here.

Dr. Barron asked the Board members to use care, time and consideration in discussing the measure. He stated it probably will be needed here in years to come when Mt. Morris becomes crowded. He asked the supervisors to consider the old saying, "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside". Dr. Barron suggested if the abandonment is owing to economic pressure, that the Board economize on other things which can easily be done.

Knights Lose to CFA 12 to 8

The first defeat of the season for the Addison Knights baseball squad was suffered Tuesday afternoon at the expense of Corning Free Academy to the tune of 12 to 8. The Corningites scored only two extra base hits when Box hit a three bagger in the third and Barton hit a two base hit.

William Donegan Dies in Corning

William H. Donegan, long a resident of Addison died at his late home in Corning Monday morning, May 9, 1938. Burial was in St. Catherine's Cemetery, Addison, Wednesday morning following the funeral in St. Patrick's Church, Corning. Death came suddenly although he had been troubled with heart ailment for three years.

Mr. Donegan was born in this place August 15, 1862 the son of Peter and Mary Cahill Donegan. June 11, 1890 he married Miss Margaret Hickey of this place and the couple continued to live in Addison until 18 years ago when they removed to Corning. His home before leaving Addison was in the house which is now the home of Mrs. A. B. Chatfield on Brooks Ave.

Mr. Donegan had a long business career in Addison. For many years he was in the shoe department of the E. M. Welles Department Store which occupied the building now known as the John Davis grocery. Later Mr. Welles opened what was known as the Annex Store in the store now owned and occupied by John Russ, which Mr. Donegan managed. Later still Mr. Donegan went into the grocery business for himself, running what was known as the Donegan Corner Grocery, in the building now occupied by Mrs. Erma Little. Naturally of a friendly disposition, Mr. Donegan throughout his business career here held hundreds of friends with his pleasant smile and his willingness to please.

Upon leaving Addison he went to work in the Corning Glass Works, and his visits to this community have been infrequent for the last few years, but there are still many of the older residents of this place who will long remember "Billy" Donegan as a friend of the past.

Survivors are: his wife, three sons, Lawrence J. of Chicago, Idd., William J. and F. Gerald of Corning; a daughter, Mrs. C. K. McCreight of Brooklyn; two grandchildren, Jessie and Margaret Donegan of Corning.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with tne Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Thicker Plantings

M. B. has a question about his farm garden. "If germination of seed is low, should the plantings be thicker?"

Professor C. B. Raymond of the department of vegetable crops answers: "If the percentage of germination is low, somewhat thicker plantings will be desirable.

"One of the most frequent causes of reduced yields in the home garden, however, is that the crops are too thick in the row. Thinning is a slow, hard, disagreeable task that is too easily postponed.

"Most seed catalogs have valuable suggestions on varieties, time, and rates of seeding. Read the catalogs to be sure you understand the terms used. Care must be taken to make certain that the recommendations apply to your county.

"More detailed information on the home garden is given in Cornell bulletins E-383 'Varieties of Vegetables for 1938, and E-344 "The Home Garden'. Single copies may be had free from the college".

Winter Oats

E. W., writes: "I have been reading of winter oats. I have sown rye and wheat in the fall, but never heard of sowing oats then. If it is possible, however, to get a crop of oats by sowing in the fall, I want to know about it".

Professor G. H. Serviss of the agronomy department replies: "It would not be satisfactory to plant our ordinary oat varieties in the fall, for they would winter kill.

"In the south growers have varieties both of winter oats and spring oats, and in the far south winter oats sown in the fall usually do better than spring oats. No varieties are resistant enough to cold to be sown in New York in the fall".

By M. B. Allen

In a special assembly Wednesday afternoon, Chief of Police Elmer C. Bovee, as chairman of the American Legion safety committee, introduced J. J. Heavey of Huntington, Ind, safety supervisor of the Erie Railroad. Other members of the party were William Kennedy, commander of the local American Legion and Captain O'Dea of the Erie Police.

In his address Mr. Heavey stated that one of the most important problems of America was the safety on the highway and railroads. While the main object of the talk was to prevent trespassing, a dangerous habit the railroads have been unable to check. The fact that, "Any time is train time on any American railroad", was also brought up.

Several examples of fatalities resulting from unintentional meddling with railroad property by children were used to prove that all railroad property is dangerous. These same examples were used to support the railroads' plea, "Don't use the railroad as a thoroughfare".

Although the companies have reduced the number of serious accidents to their employees by a large per cent they cannot reduce those to trespassers. The thought that more people were killed in auto accidents in 1937 than in all the world wars, and that over $1,800,000,000 were used to pay the material losses of these accidents, helped to put the need for safety over to the audience.

Mr. Heavey closed with the following saying:

"'Taint what we have but what we give,
'Taint where we are but how we live,
'Taint what we do but how we do it,
Makes this life worth going through"

Free Summer Course On Training Ship for Boys and Young Men

To acquaint the youth of America with the opportunities of a career as officers in the United States Merchant Marine, the American Nautical Academy, National Training School for Merchant Marine Officers, Washington, D. C., announced today that boys and young men between the ages of 10 and 25 years will be allowed to secure practical ship experience on board a training ship of the Academy within the period from June 1 to October 1.

The young men may remain on board ship for the entire period or for any shorter time they may wish, but not for less than four weeks.

There is no tuition charge for any of the courses offered by the Academy, and no obligation for future merchant marine, military or naval service of any kind is incurred by the young men.

There is no charge for instruction nor for living quarters on board ship. The only required expense is for meals which are 49c. Three meals are served daily.

The school ship to which the young men will be assigned is the Training Ship "MARSALA", a five-masted barkentine-rigged vessel of 2,500 tons, 300 feet long and 46 feet wide. The vessel was built in 1919-20 and is one of the largest sailing vessels in the world.

While on board ship cadets will receive minor medical treatment when necessary without charge. On Sundays the young men will be allowed to attend divine services of their respective denominations ashore.

This is the ninth annual summer course offered by the Academy, and will be under the personal supervision of the Captain Commandant of the Academy who will be in command of the vessel.

While on board ship the boys will follow the regular daily ship routine, and will be given practical instruction in nautical subjects including seamanship (ship's work) signaling, rowing, handling and use of motor and pulling boats, life-saving, and naval drills. They will also receive instruction in the use of life buoys, first aid, the duties of lookouts, the compass, log, lead, and ground tackle, as well as the watch in port —their duties and responsibilities.

Students will join the training ship in Long Island Sound for the summer training period.

Those completing the summer course with a passing grade will be eligible to apply for a scholarship in the regular course.

The regular course is designed to cover a period of three years of sea service. The first two of these years the cadet spends cruising, and studying on the training ship. For the third year the cadet is assigned to a steamship of one of the merchant marine lines. Following the completion of these three years of sea service the cadet is eligible to take the officer's examination of the United States Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, Department of Commerce, for a certificate as a third officer in the deck division of steamships in the Merchant Service of the United States.

Due to the fact that the number of accommodations available is limited, those wishing to take advantage of this opportunity should write at once to the American Nautical Academy, National Training School for Merchant Marine Officers, Washington, D. C.

It's Time to Fight Tent Caterpiller

"If you have not already done something about the tent caterpillar, you better start now while the insects are still small and before they begin wandering all over the garden or orchard", said Professor A. H. MacAndrews of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

"On stormy and cold days the whole colony of caterpillars can be found within the cell. Hand pick this and destroy at once, but be sure the caterpillars are at home in the web and not out feeding on the foliage, otherwise the destruction of the web is a waste of time", warns Professor MacAndrews.

He says: "Burning the webs on the trees is often resorted to but it is not recommended for general use, as the average person does more permanent harm to the bark with the fire than the insects do. Besides, many of the insects drop to the ground at the approach of the heat and later crawl back.

"If you prefer to spray; lead arsenate mixed with water, at the rate of 2 teaspoonsful of the lead arsenate powder in 1 gallon of water, or 2 lbs. of lead arsenate to 50 gallons of water; can be used very effectively. Be sure that the spray reaches all the foliage and is put on thoroughly. Don't delay, every day makes it harder to control the insect, and when the caterpillars start to wander, it is a poor time to think of doing something.

"If your trees are clean now but your neighbor's trees are badly infested, you better put a band of tanglefoot around the base of your trees to prevent the caterpillars on the trees of your neighbor from invading your trees and eating the foliage.

"Associated with this nest is the forest tent caterpillar. This insect has no tent of silk in a crotch of a limb, but collects in colonies on the bark and can be crushed by hand or sprayed as recommended for the orchard species. The forest tent shows a preference for our shade trees, and is very common on maple and ash this year but will also feed on the apple and other fruit trees. It is recognized by the conspicuous line of large white spots down the middle of the back.

"To keep down both of these pests a regular campaign of early spring sprays should be resorted to. In commercial orchards where this is done, they have no trouble with the tent caterpillar."

Short Comment on Current Affairs at Home and Abroad Affecting New York Agriculture

Prepared personally by

HOLTON V. NOYES

Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets
New York State

Planting time is here. Sometime within the next few weeks all of the planting will have been—or should have been—completed. It will be followed immediately by cultivating or weed-time. The manner in which planting is done is of real importance in the question of weed control later. I, personally, have a very great preference for planting corn in hills on the checkerboard plan so that it can be cultivated both ways. This gives you mechanical control of weeds in all of the field with the exception of the little spots occupied by the hills of corn.

If this planting is carefully done so that the rows both ways are straight, you can practically do away with hand weeding of any sort and have an absolutely clean field. On our farm, experience has shown that we raise just as many cornstalks as we do when the corn is planted in continuous rows, and more corn.

The most troublesome weed on our New York State farms is quack grass. It is practically impossible to control, except by this method. I will venture to assert that at least 90 per cent of the corn grown in New York State is grown in continuous rows and that out in the great corn belt where corn is the principal cash crop, practically 100 per cent is grown in hills. In other words, in the great corn belt where the success of this one particular crop is all important, nobody plants corn except in checkerboard hills. The result is that you can ride hundreds of miles through the corn belt and see nothing but clean, beautiful looking cornfields and none of those weed smothered corn fields we frequently see in New York State.

It is more work to plant a field by machinery on the checkerboard plan because it is necessary to use a check-row attachment to the corn planter. According to the experience on our farm, it is richly well worth the extra trouble. In the West where corn is so important this same checkrow apparatus is used universally.

I have been talking about corn because that is the planted crop upon which most dairy farms depend and it is, therefore, more important than any one crop, but the same general principle of weed control applies to all farm crops. It takes only a little observation of the oat fields in New York State to discover that the presence of wild mustard is costing the farmers hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. On very many farms the fertility and the labor that go into the production of oats are pretty much usurped by wild mustard and in many cases the mustard has taken such complete control of the field that the oats are actually smothered out.

Whenever you see a clean oat field or one with very little mustard in it, it is worthwhile to find out how that particular farmer has managed to control mustard and to adopt that method yourself, in order that at least one-half of your efforts and the fertility of your soil will not be wasted on something that is entirely worthless.

There are many other ordinary garden crops which the dairy farmers raise which must be kept free from weeds if good results are to be obtained. Those who make a commercial business of raising these garden crops such as potatoes, onions, etc., do not tolerate any weeds at all in the field because they find it worthwhile to their business to keep them out. The same thing is true with the ordinary dairy farmer in respect to every crop he raises, and it is necessary to maintain continuous weed control or sooner or later the weeds will get the best of him.

From the point of view of dollars and cents, weed control is highly important and from the aesthetic point of view—that is, the satisfaction of looking out upon clean, well-tilled, weedless fields—it is far more than worthwhile. Farming is both a way of earning a living and a way of life. From both points of view weed control is very important. Weed control should begin with planting and never end until winter drives you out of the fields.

Caring for the Lawn

MAINTENANCE of first-class lawns requires long, hard work, and patience. For those who are willing to stick by the job at hand, the information here will be of assistance.

Weeds, of course, are an eternal problem. They must be given vigorous battle each succeeding year. Early spring and late fall are the best times for weed fighting, as the moist conditions then make it more easy to pull them by the roots.

Dig out dandelions at least two inches below the surface. Shallow cutting is worse than useless as the remaining root forms several new plants.

Crab grass is one of the most widespread and persistent of the current grass enemies. In late summer, when it is about to seed, keep it cut closely. It should be pulled out by the roots in late summer and early fall. Special rakes can be obtained for the purpose if pulling by hand proves too laborious.

When the pulling chore is done, balanced plant food should be applied to the lawn,—four pounds to every 100 square feet. Next wet the lawn. Then apply seed and rake or roll it in.

Crab grass dies in the fall, but drops seed which germinates the following spring. The practice here recommended (it should be performed sometime between August 15 and September 15) should give a good crop of grass in the early spring, so dense and vigorous that the crab grass seedlings, which germinate comparatively late, will not have sufficient space or light for development.

In caring for the lawn, remember to make additional applications of plant food periodically where there are large trees.

Water lawns late in the day. Do not sprinkle every day or so, but give one good soaking a week, wetting the soil to a depth of several inches.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

Common Chick Diseases

Most day-old and started chicks purchased today are healthy when they leave the hatchery. Any diseases which appear in the flock usually come as the result of mishandling in shipment or in the care, food and water as well as housing after the owner gets them.

Chicks travel safely hundreds of miles in good condition. Day-old chicks need no feed nor water during the shipment. It is imperative that they be kept in heated cars and stations while enroute. Started chicks which are two or three weeks old have to be fed and watered during shipment. The purchaser should look for the tag which comes on the shipment and lists the attention given the birds on the trip by the express company.

Chicks which have been chilled or over-heated either in shipment or after they reach the purchaser's hands may develop diarrhoea or colds. Over-feeding may also cause these two troubles. The treatment for both is quite simple. For small chicks dissolve about three ounces of Epsom salts in water and moisten enough mash for one feeding. Place the mash so that all the chicks can eat at the same time to insure all of them a dose. If you are using a cheap mash change at once to a good mash for starting chicks. A good starting mash will save maney and chicks because it is a balanced ration containing cod liver oil and green food. Getting the chicks out-of-doors where they can find green food will help.

Bacillary white diarrhoea is different in origin from ordinary diarrhoea. Often called BWD it is hatched with the chick. The infection spreads rapidly in a flock. The best way of handling this disease is to remove and burn all victims of the disease and disinfect the house. This disease appears in the first two weeks and causes great losses. No hen from such a flock of chicks should be used as a breeder unless proper tests show that she does not have the disease. If possible get rid of the whole flock, clean the house and start over.

Coccidiosis appears in chicks when they reach three weeks of age or older. It is caused by a small organism which punctures the intestinal tract. It thrives in hot, damp conditions and spreads very rapidly. The chicks can pick it up from the floor or dirty ground. Keep the house clean and feed the regular mash mixed with an equal amount of dried milk by bulk. Feed the mixture three or four days. After a period of a week or two if the disease is still present feed the mixture again. Keep the floor clean especially after each treatment.

Two Weeks Left For 1938 Signup

Announcement last week that work sheet sign-up would be practically complete by the middle of May was recently confirmed by the Agricultural Conservation Office. However, work sheets may be accepted until May 31, according to an announcement received at the Conservation Office this week from federal authorities.

Fourteen hundred twenty-five Steuben county farmers have already filed work sheets, according to a recent announcement. Many have filed work sheets who previously had no intentions of doing so, mainly because of recent favorable changes in the program, together with credit facilities which make the program more to the liking of farmers here.

The county committee is working on the so-called Group A farms establishing acreages for individual soil depleting goals which could only be done after all work sheets for these farms has been filed. Such necessary information will soon be mailed to all farmers concerned.

Setting May 31 as the last date for sign-up under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program means that all farmers wishing to participate in any way, and later file application for payment for practices performed between January 1 and December 1, 1938, will need to file a work sheet by the above date. There will be absolutely no extension of this date, and therefore farmers even wishing to perform fall practices will need to file a work sheet this month.

Work sheets may be filed up to the final date with any one of the field supervisors or at the Agricultural Conservation Office, 3rd floor F. & M. Bank Bldg., Bath. Information regarding various forms of credit may also be obtained at the Conservation Office.

CANNING RHUBARB JUICE

"Have rhubarb now and all the rest of the year, too," says the New York State College of Home Economics, as it tells how to can the tasty rich-in-iron juice to use in beverages, jellied desserts and pudding sauces.

Cut the rhubarb into small pieces—the large, older stalks that are not tender enough for sauce are all right for juice. Add just enough cold water to cover, and cook them slowly in a covered kettle until soft. Do not boil the juice.

Then strain out the juice by pouring the cooked rhubarb into a jelly bag and let it drip overnight. In the morning there will be some sediment of finely-divided pulp which was not removed by the straining; be careful when pouring off the clear juice not to mix this in, or better yet, clarify the juice by pouring it through three or four layers of cheesecloth.

If sugar is desired, add it now, in the proportion of one-half to one cup of sugar to each gallon of juice. Next, fill the jars with the juice, place a new rubber on each jar, adjust the cover, and partly seal the jar by adjusting only the upper clamp or by slightly screwing the lid.

Then place the jars on a rack in a large kettle of water, make sure that the water covers the jars to a depth of at least one inch, and pasteurize by keeping at a temperature between 160 and 170 degrees Fahrenheit, for 20 or 30 minutes, to destroy any yeasts or molds that might be in it. Begin to count the time for pasteurizing when the water reaches a temperature of 160 and 170 degrees Fahrenheit; keep pint cans at this temperature for 20 minutes and quarts for 30 minutes.

Remove the jars from the water bath and completely seal them. Cool them as rapidly as possible, avoiding a draft on the jars. If desired, the juice may be diluted before serving.

While Conway, an ivory hunter holds them off, Tim slips away to bring Ivory Patrol troopers to their rescue. Spider captures him and finds a letter which discloses that Tim's father has found the fabulously rich elephant's burial ground. Getting in touch with Professor Tyler in gorilla land by means of drum signals, Spider tells him Tim will die if he does not lead them to the Ivory hoard. The professor demands to see Tim, who is held in the swamp hideout. Meantime Sergeant Gates, hunting for Tim, decides that he is most likely being held captive by Spider in the swamp. He prepares to trail the jungle cruiser, but as he does so a leopard leaps on him.

"Live, Love and Learn" Tops New Avon Program

Teaming Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell for the third time, with Robert Benchley featured in one of his funniest characterizations and with Helen Vinson as the "other woman", the new M-G-M romantic comedy, "Live, Love and Learn" comes to the Avon Theatre for a two day showing, Thursday and Friday.

Placed largely in the colorful atmosphere of Greenwich Village's Bohemian art colony, "Live, Love and Learn" develops a sparkling story of the married life of a penniless artist and the girl who forsook wealth and society to marry him.

In abrupt contrast to the grim scenes of "Night Must Fall," their most recent teaming triumph, the settings of "Live, Love and Learn" are faithful reproductions of Greenwich Village.

The role of "Julie," Montgomery's wife, is said to offer Rosalind Russell a telling opportunity to display the talents for which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer a few weeks ago accorded her stardom.

Hornell District Epworth League Convention Held in Addison Sat.

Saturday program attracts 150 young people from 26 different churches — Osgood chosen president for coming year—William Wilson of Buffalo Banquet Speaker.

The Rev. Osgood, Nelson, was elected president of the Hornell District Epworth League at the annual convention held in the Addison Methodist Church Saturday, May 7. This was one of the largest conventions held by the league in several years. There were 150 delegates from the various churches in the district at the affair.

The opening session of the convention was devoted to registration, getting acquainted and a fellowship program. Miss Pauline Martin opened the formal program by extending the welcome of the Addison leaguers and church to the visiting delegates, pastors and friends.

The response was given by Leroy Morris, Coopers Plains. A short worship service was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Babcock, Woodhull.

On the roll call of the League Chapters, responses were received from the following: Conesus, Scottsburg, Addison, Livonia, Corning, Coopers Plains, Hornell, Savona, Painted Post, Arkport, Mt. Morris, Greenwood, Hammondsport, Dansville, Nelson, Lima, Woodhull, Gaines, Jasper, Bath, Canisteo, Troupsburg, Westfield, Cowanesque and Cameron.

The morning address was delivered by the president, George Wilson who spoke on "Understanding Ourselves". This topic provided material for the introduction to the study topic for the various groups at the afternoon session.

Wilbur Bulkley of Addison, who was active in the promotion of the local affair, was a member of the nominating committee which met in the morning. The Rev. Burdick was chairman of the committee.

Luncheon was served in the church parlors at noon by members of the Sunday school assisted by some of the ladies of the various church organizations.

The afternoon session was opened by the Rev. J. W. Babcock who supervised the worship program. Two Epworth League projects, including the Williamsville Children's Home and the Buffalo Goodwill Industries were topics for discussion. The objectives for the first project are to get produce to the home for the use of the children.

The principal item of business during the business session was relative to a campaign for $100 for repairs to Epworth Inn at Silver Lake. The discussion on this was led by Leroy Stryker, Hornell.

A deputation team from Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima spoke under the direction of their leader, Dean Spangle. They also led in a discussion of personal problems of young people.

William J. Wilson, Buffalo Presbyterian layman, was the speaker at the banquet held in the church parlors in the evening. His topic was of great interest to young people, being a practical talk on the part young people play in church work. Mrs. Garland G. Lacey, wife of the host pastor, gave vocal solos during and after the dinner.

COMMUNICATION

Stop! Look!! Listen!!! Halt—watch both ways—study history! It is time to rest awhile and study the road signs.

Common sense, plus historical teachings, shows us to be on the wrong road. True patriotism demands that we find the right highway and then advance.

You may desire to be patriotic—you may think you are so constituted—but are you? May there not exist in you an indifference—a political desire—an, ignorance of history in spite of our schools, libraries and churches, which collectively dooms this nation to the same fate others have met?

History shows that where any nation has allowed a bureaucratic-politico invasion of control such nation has failed. Is not this the road we are now traveling? Then let this Government get out of all business AND STAY OUT!

If a man has the brains and strength to make a million dollars or more honestly, let him have it! Not many such men will abuse it. Most of them, sooner or later, will benefit others by wise distribution or bequest. After all it is the man of wealth who is the best employer of labor. If one state or county or municipality can balance the budget—others can.

The issuing of a twenty-year bond to build a road that will not last more than ten years is foolish.

We are living, politically at least, at too fast a pace. This pace, kept up by borrowing and high taxes, means national ruin.

Analyze your patriotism! High taxes have reduced the selling price of much real estate fifty per cent in the past ten years.

If you do not care to scrutinize your patriotism too closely, it is suggested that you get the government to buy an automobile for every family in the United States and pay all expenses on the car for one year! This would allow all automobile workers to get five to ten dollars for eight hours labor and also allow many families to build a woodshed or paint the house!
